

MRS. AYER. WOMAN READS SPIRIT OF MAN. REV. KELLER.

Study of the Assailed Pastor at Close Range by a Keen Student of Human Nature.

REV. JOHN KELLER.
(Sketch in Court.)

BY HARRIET HUBBARD AYER.

Rev. John Keller, in the Jersey City Court-room, is the incarnation of calm, patient, unprovoked suffering. It is impossible to misinterpret the patient expression of a contemplative mind and physical.

The Arlington clergyman is the typical Anglican priest.

He is of medium height, a little too heavy, a little stooped-shouldered, as men get who are of a contemplative mind or who bend over books or writing materials much.

His face is very gentle in its general expression, not weak, extremely peaceful save for the constant look of pain. It is the face of a man of a deep compassionate nature—doomed to walk forever more in darkness, uncomplaining, but suffering intensely.

It is easily mutilated, and the great blue goggles cover not only the wounded eye and the empty socket, but reach almost to the eyebrows.

Spiritual Expression.

The form of the face is round until the forehead is reached, when there is an elevation and expansion, which gives it a spiritual look the true round face never has.

It is preeminently a peaceful face. The nose is an almost perfect specimen of the Greek type, indicating natural refinement, artistic taste and great love of the beautiful. Men with Greek noses are often poets, but are never fighters. The slight spread at the nostrils, which we pure Greek nose has not, indicates compassion.

A man with a Greek nose, while not devoid of energy and capable of tremendous endurance and indomitable, protracted work, cannot endure friction or confusion. I have never seen a Greek-nosed man or woman "huff" as we term that excited condition of mind and body we are, as a people, so much enamored of.

The upper part of the face is strongly developed, especially above the temples, showing idealism, which again means love of the beautiful and exalted.

Even Disposition.

The eyebrows are gently arched and even, and are far apart, indicating an even disposition. The chin is emphasized by the shape of the forehead, which takes an arched form in the upper arch.

Seen in profile, the forehead has a

SILENT EVIDENCE.

The spirit of a man as he is, not as he would appear, is revealed in his face, head and body. A man with a noble soul never yet looked like a malefactor.

A seer of women never before exhibited the calm, gentle dignity of the blinded clergyman. If Mr. Keller is guilty of the atrocious crime Mrs. Barker charges him with, he represents a new type.

Curved appearance—symbolic of tenderness and gentleness.

Mr. Keller's face in profile is more spiritual-looking than in full face. At all times and from any point it impresses one with its native gentleness and dignity. The signs for truthfulness are found in the breadth and height of the forehead. The mutilation of the eyes makes it impossible to say whether the facial symbol for truthfulness was visible in his eyes or no. A truthful eye tells its tale in its glance. We all recognize it, and instinctively we know the untruthful eye that will not look fairly into ours.

The face is very human. There is no sign of asceticism or austerity of character. At the same time by no stretch of the imagination, or dissection, could one describe it as indicating sensuality. It is not a strong face, but rather a tender, compassionate one. These familiar with the London clergy who work in the Whitechapel district have seen a similar face ministering to the sick and giving hope and aid to the disolute and innocent with equal tenderness.

There are deep lines in Mr. Keller's face—furrows from the rings of the nose to the corners of the mouth indicating great physical suffering. Otherwise the countenance is placid without a mark of irritation or a track made by the storm of passion or habit of intrigue. Mr. Keller's mouth and chin are covered by a light brown beard, so it is impossible to say what story they might tell to the believer in facial signs. The clergyman has what is called a big top head. The crown is raised and well developed, showing benevolence, conscientiousness, and all the venerable organs are prominent.

The back of the head is singularly flat. The distance from the ear back is much less than usual. This is the collar-bone's head. The organs of philosophy, gentleness, adhesiveness, necessity for companionship and a home of one's own are undeveloped.

I never saw a Lothario with a head flat as the back.

The organs of time and tune, as well as language, just over the eyes, are conspicuously full. Mr. Keller is probably musical. If he is not he could have been with very little persuasion.

The ear is small, set low and rather close to the head. It is the typical peaceful ear.

As he appears in court it is impossible for the unprejudiced observer to feel aught but the deepest sympathy for Mr. Keller.

Impress of the Soul.

The spirit of a man as he is, not as he would wish to appear, is revealed in his face and head and body. The impress of his soul is manifest in every man. A man with a noble soul never yet looked like a malefactor.

A seer of women never before exhibited the calm, gentle dignity of the blinded clergyman. If Mr. Keller is guilty of the atrocious crime Mrs. Barker charges him with he represents a new type.

Incidentally it may be of interest to readers to know that Mr. Keller is not a three-fingered, black-bearded, beetle-browed giant, as some of the papers have depicted, but a man of medium size, with light brown hair and beard, whose pitifully sad face is of a ghastly whiteness.

He wears the clerical dress of the Anglican priest, and I noticed when the clothing which he wore when he was shot was offered in evidence that the garments were not of fine cloth, but on the contrary of very inexpensive materials. The top coat, all stained with blood, was certainly not that of a man who gratified a taste for elegance or luxury, if he possessed such an inclination.

The clergyman's cheap black garments spread out on the table in the court room were eloquent testimony for the man who, according to the statements of his neighbors, of his salary of $1,000 a year, expended $200 every twelve months in charity.

TWO WOMEN AT THE HEAD OF A BILLION-DOLLAR CO.

Mrs. Estelle True-Nell and Her Daughter in the Mining Business—The Mother's Story of Her Scheme.

A despatch from Pierre, S. Dak., tells of the incorporation of the Billion-Dollar Mining Company, naming as incorporators Estelle True-Nell and Pearl Young of New York, and Oscar Nelson of Pierre. The address was given of the New York partners as Nos. 429 and 10 Park Row Building.

A shrewd-looking woman of forty-five or thereabouts, not unbecomingly looking from behind a pair of glasses, when the reporter was admitted to her office, she was seated in a high-backed chair and perusing legal documents.

"Yes, I am Mrs. Estelle True-Nell and Pearl Young is my daughter." The head of the billion-dollar mine company showed the most even composure. She was faultlessly dressed.

Her Business Plans.

"I have nothing to say concerning the corporation at present, but on Wednesday of next week I will tell you all about it. You see we are not quite ready to give the story to the public. Oh, no, it is not incorporated for a billion dollars. We make to give it some name and hit upon that. The venture is entirely new."

"I don't mind telling you that we have mining properties all over the country, and our business is to buy and sell them. We will begin in gold, silver and copper properties, and have a number of mines under our control. As for capital, we have plenty of it."

"Our business will not be limited to mining properties. We have other things going on in the business world. You may say that not a dollar will be handled by us. Every dollar that comes in and every dollar that goes out will pass through our bank. No, I will not divulge the name of our bankers. Oscar Nelson is not connected with the company. His name was needed to incorporate. You cannot elicit more information from me to-day."

The offices are neatly furnished. In several corners are well-polished glass cases containing samples of ore. The walls are hung with what appears to be finely executed paintings in oil. There is a bust here and there, and Mrs. True-Nell fits the place she occupies. She had arisen to announce the interview at an end.

A St. Louis Episode.

Mrs. True-Nell said in answer to questions: "Yes, indeed, I lived in St. Louis. I had a great deal of business there. I knew Dr. Morgan. He used to bother me. Yes, I was accused of setting his property away from him, but the story was ridiculous, and it was so proved."

"I allowed my attorney, Louis B. Wagner, to transact the business. Of course I saw Dr. Morgan often, and he grew to like me much. But when I discovered that he was separating from his wife I thought to see as little of him as possible. Young man, I was no marrying woman. You see, his real estate was heavily encumbered, and I really did not care for it. My mines were down at Joplin. He was down there three weeks one time and two weeks another. He had the mines inspected. He knew what they were. They were better than his old property."

"My attorney conducted all of the transactions. The exchange was made. His wife objected to the exchange and accused me of influencing Dr. Morgan. It was ridiculous. Dr. Morgan had been persecuted. That is all I have to say concerning the matter."

"Next Wednesday I will give out the news of the corporation, and then you can boast it or roast it as much as you please. Until next Wednesday I am silent."

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 20.—Mrs. Estelle True-Nell figured in an extensive mine and real estate deal in St. Louis in the summer of 1898, and became involved in the tale of the law because of her charge of selling mine property in Joplin, Mo., that did not belong to her. The warrant was not served, because Mrs. True-Nell left the city.

Mrs. True-Nell, who was known also by the names of Mrs. N. Brown and Mrs. L. Zuley, appeared in St. Louis in June of 1898 and stopped at the Menger Hotel.

She first gained notoriety because of a charge made against her by Dr. Kosuth Morgan, of No. 2800 Chestnut avenue. He alleged that she was a spiritualist, a palm reader, a clairvoyant and had executed her influence on him to transfer a row of eleven lots on Chestnut avenue, valued at $11,000, for some mining property in Joplin, Mo.

Mrs. True-Nell denied that her acts were improper. She claimed that Dr. Morgan came to her while she lived in Kansas City and wanted to trade her some St. Louis suburban residences for her mining property in Joplin. She said she had letters from Dr. Morgan written in endorsing terms.

On August 30, 1898, the warrant charging her with fraudulently selling mining property that did not belong to her was issued, but by that time she was out of the city.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 20.—Three men lost their lives and a dozen or more were badly hurt by the collapse of a railroad bridge and the wrecking of a work train on the Erie R.R. near Hendricks, W. Va., this morning.

The dead are: William Booker, master mechanic, aged fifty; W. D. Crowl, driver, and a laborer named Morrison. The injured are laborers.

DEWEY TALKS OF WARBOARD PLANS

Says Now Is Time to Prepare for Hostilities.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Admiral Dewey called at the White House today to pay his respects and inquire after Mrs. McKinley's health. The Admiral leaves on Wednesday for Newport, R. I., to attend a meeting of the general Naval Board, of which he is president.

The Admiral says the work of the Board in preparing plans to meet the contingencies of possible war is very interesting. "Our work," said he, "is somewhat analogous to that performed by the general staffs of the German and French armies. It is preparation for war."

"I think we should have a general staff in our army," said the Admiral, "should regret to see the United States involved in another war, but if one should come I hope the work the Naval Board is doing may be of service in finding us prepared for it."

POPE CONFERS WITH GIBBONS.

Church Matters in America, Cuba and Philippines.

ROME, June 20.—Cardinal Gibbons starts tomorrow for Florence, where he will remain a week. Subsequently the Cardinal will go to Milan, Normandy, for a month's rest, of which he feels the need.

Although Cardinal Gibbons refuses to discuss his mission to Rome, it is said in competent quarters that the suggestion of the Vatican in regard to the diplomatic representation of the United States there came to nothing.

Cardinal Gibbons is understood to have accomplished a great deal toward the settlement of the Cuba and Philippines questions, and regarding Catholicism in the United States.

PHILBIN READY FOR HERLIHY.

Police Captain's Case Goes to Grand Jury To-Morrow.

District Attorney Philbin announced today that he would present to the Grand Jury to-morrow the charges against Police Captain John D. Herlihy. He expects an indictment to follow immediately.

Judge Cowan, in Part 1 of the Criminal Court, made an order this afternoon transferring Herlihy's case from Special to General Sessions, thus assuring a jury trial. Commissioner Murphy had addressed a letter to the District Attorney requesting that he accused Captain be allowed a trial by jury.

Herlihy is charged with neglect of duty while in command of the Eldridge street station, in allowing disorderly and illegal resorts to exist.

REVOLUTION QUELLED.

Columbian Insurgents Said to Be Overpowered.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Dr. Mariano Zúñiga, the Minister from Colombia, has received despatches from the capital of Colombia which he regards as setting at rest the reports that the Colombian revolutionists are again in strong force around Panama.

The Minister's despatches state that the uprising had been entirely stamped out, with the exception of a few small and scattered bands operating in the neighborhood of Panama.

HE DIED LIKE A POISONED MAN.

Physician Insists on Inquiry Into Death of Pullis.

Frank Pullis, of Homestead, N. J., died early this morning from causes which the attending physician, Dr. William Menger, has been unable to determine. The physician has refused to grant a death certificate until an investigation has been made.

Mrs. Hannah Pullis, mother of Frank, died last January, leaving property amounting to $15,000 to her son, Charles and Frank, cutting off Edward, the oldest, from a share in the estate. James died in March last, and left his property to be divided between Charles and Frank.

On Monday night Edward called at the house of his father to see the sick man, and it is said had a bitter quarrel at that time with his brother Charles. The latter had sent for a lawyer to draw up Frank's will, but the lawyer left the house when informed by Dr. Menger that the patient was not in condition to sign.

On Tuesday evening, it is said, a will was drawn up by which the dying man left his personal property to his wife, whom he married a few weeks ago, and his share of the real estate to his brother Charles.

Dr. Menger says that Frank Pullis suffered from convulsions previous to his death, and that his condition might have been caused by some kind of poison.

County Physician Converse has been asked to make an investigation. Edward Pullis is a Justice of the Peace in North Bergen and is also collector for a railroad company. The father, William Pullis, kept a hotel on the Hackensack plank road.

It is a picture of Dr. Koch and the newly discovered invention, the Koch Inhalation.

The vapors of these healing oils of the Koch treatment are easily breathed into the air, thus causing the lungs to be entirely filled with them, and the lungs are healed as if by magic. The vapors are composed of antiseptics, disinfectants, and the great Koch tubercule, and the effect is to kill the disease germs and expel them. In fact, no form of germ life can live when thoroughly under the influence of the Koch Inhalation. Send for the Koch Lung Cure booklet.

Don't take any more medicine into the stomach. Lung medicine is always hard on the stomach. The addresses of cured patients will be gladly given. If you don't believe the patients, call upon their neighbors, and you will get the truth. Call at No. 18 West 23d st. and see the wonderful Inhalation Invention. You will find that this treatment has absolutely cured hundreds of patients after every known medicine has failed.
